

WE NOMINATE

Charies Klemm Agle, 51-year old planning consultant, who this week—before a jammed Princeton Township Committee meeting—rolled up his sleeves and let fly with some hard truths in beseeching Princetonians "to face facts and rise above the victous complacency of insularity by joint comprehensive plans and prompt action." While many will not agree with Agle's concept of a permanent Princeton Green Belt, involving eight municipalities and three counties in the so-called Greater Princeton Area, Agle has rendered a public service by defining what he and his associates mean by a green belt for this community and by dramatically documenting some of the problems Princeton must solve if it is not to become just "Any Town, U.S.A."

Brought into the limelight by pressures generated in the Township's Edgerstoune section by the offer of a gift of "Stony Brook park land" to the Township, Agle explained Monday evening how a group of private citizens and institutions—acting in the absence of any effective governmental leadership—hoped to acquire and to donate to the municipalities concerned a 100-foot wide green belt, or parkway, encircling Princeton and to plant this band with adequate trees. The Stony Brook tract would be an essential part of this infinitely larger picture. Ultimately, as and if traffic continues to strangle Princeton, the need may develop to use this strip for local, non-truck, light traffic—not for through truck traffic. (See Topics of the Town).

Agle, who has carried forward "City Planning and Housing Consultation" in more than 100 cities and two years ago hammered out the Township Zoning Ordinance, insists that he is not offering a panacea but is urging "conservation of future opportunities." Emphasizing that Princeton probably qualifies in June, 1987, as the "most threatened community in the United States" and is now "precisely in the center of the greatest concentration of population anywhere in the world," he envisions an ever-rising traffic flow which in a period of years will top 20,000 vehicles a day, It is also his conviction that failure to plan for the future is attributable to the people of the Borough and Township "who neither know enough nor care enough about the future of the community either to encourage or insist that our local governments protect our future."

Successful as an architect as well as a planner, Agle points out that the "forgotten responsibility of our municipal governments is the preservation of community quality through the acquistion of additional open space to keep step with the expansion of additional open space to keep step with the expansion of population and the consumption of open land by subdivision into lots." The character of the Princeton area, he argues, "is more the result of the openess of the University and of large private holdings not yet cut up (before they get into estates) than any providence or foresight of either municipal body or the people. Likewise with roads: we still do not have even a complete continuous parallel to Assasa Street even on any Official Map."

For seeking to awaken the community to the "immediacy of the threats" confronting it on all sides; for taking a long look at the future and warning that the "automobile has made most of our streets, and all of our earlier thinking, obsolete;" for calling for action now; this Indiana-born Princetonian is Town Torics" nominee for

THOSE MEN ARE HERE AGAIN Reunions Under Way. Dis-daining cover of darkness, a tribe of South African bushmen will move openly into Princeton this weekend, soon to hobnob gaily with several hundred members of the French Foreign Legion.

Not far from the spacious tents housing the latter will be squad after squad of bell-bottomed sailors, nattily attired in an Orange and Black motif that shatters and Black motif that shatters beyond recall belief that blue is the traditional color of the U.S. Navy. From other vantage points, the community will be the target of scores of brethren in Buster Brown suits, in cowboy outfits, in Depression Day blazers covered with gray Database and in Krit ered with gay patches, and in Friars' clothing (see picture, page 3.)

It could happen only in Prince-ton and only on Reunion Week-

Every State in the Union and far-off lands ranging to Uruguay in the south and Japan in the east will be represented by the 5,000 returning Princetonians. In line with the trend of the postwar years, many of them will bring wives and children, for whom complete programs have been a part of the planning that begins—literally—as much as two years before the opening of a major required.

Much of the entertainment will be purely recreational in nature, and the warm June nights will carry the lilting beat of many a Dixieland Band. But the war brought another change in tempo that has become permanent: fac-ulty-alumni seminars on a wide time programs, offering an educational note to reunions that was unheard of 15 years ago. How It All Began

Traditionally, Princeton University graduates celebrate their biggest, or "major," Reunions every fifth June; i.e., fifth, tenth, fifteenth, etc. This week end, Princeton Reunions will celebrate a "major," for this is the 60th anniversary of the phenomenon first conceived by fundamental pack in fun-loving alumni back in

When the great P-Rade linds its way down Prospect Street on Saturday afternoon, tradition again will prevail, with the 25th Reunion Class of 1932 marching at the head of the long runks. It will be the 51st such P-Rade, the first having been tried successfully in 1906. Some 5,000 alumni will participate, a goodly turnout though a far cry from the record Victory celebration crowd of 7,300 back in 1946.

Saturday's leisurely, mile-long alumni P-rade will unfold the usual volume of hi-jinks, martial usual volume of hi-jinks, martial music and crashing array of color. Of the many floats planned for the march down Prospect Avenue to University Field, the most eye-catching will be a 40-foot Nike, recently de-classified anti-aircraft weapon which the Army is making available to the Class of 1950 "as a gesture in public relations."

Not to be outdone, the Navy will fly a blimp overhead with plans to liberate scores of balloons marked "1947." Hopes are that if wind conditions are right, they will float down rather than up, to become souvenirs of the day.

Walking in the P-rade is, of course, a tradition not to be lightly ended after a half century or more of such participation. Some 300 members of the "Old Guard," alumni graduated more than 50 years ago, will be on hand and many of them will walk from Nassau Hall to the Yale-Princeton baseball game.

Proudly labelled as "the oldest class planning to march as a unit" is 1897, a promise has been made by Princeton resident Neilson Poe. Other residents of the community who will mark the 60th auniversary of their graduation are David Magie, Archibald Culick and Living I. Pace The tion are David Magie, Archibald Gulick and Irving L. Roc. The class expects 25 to 30 members back for the occasion.

One of the oldest organized re-unions in the University's history is planned by the Class of 1892, which has announced it will have half of its 16 living members back for its 65th. Alumni sons of the class will join them in a reception Saturday at the home of William K. Prentice on Boud-

"Honor classes" of the day gathering are 1907, celebrating its 50th with the Graduate College as its headquarters, and 1932, marking its 25th within the cloistered confines of Holder Court (where dormitory rooms and the edisease University Com-Court (where dormitory rooms and the adjacent University Commons combine eating and sleeping facilities with reunion activities.) To the dismay of many a young film fan, James M. "Jimmy" Stewart has found it impossible to make the cross-country trek from Hollywood to join the 295-plus members of his class the 325-plus members of his class who will be on hand.

Question of the Week

Question: Babe Ruth's record of 60 home runs in one season has stood for exactly 30 years. Would you like to see it broken?

Mrs. Pepper Constable, Rosedale Road, national Women's Squash Raquets champion: No. And further, I don't see how it can be broken. The person right now most likely to come closest is Mickey Mantle, but I don't think he will make it. Players to-day seeth to have so many comass rugged as the old time bell players. Look at Mantle's sore leg last year. I really don't think it is going to be broken for a long time.

"BROOKSTONE"

- Q -What is Brookstone?

- Q.—What effect would the proposed dam have on Brookstone?
- Q -Are any homes under construction at Brookstone?
- Q .- How large are the plots?
- A.—Each homesite is at least 2 acres; others more than 3½ acres. Some plots have frontage on picturesque Stony Brook. Most lots are beauti-fully wooded; the rest are natural farmland.
- Q .- Row many plots are available?
- A.—No more than 15 building sites are for sale this year.

Q .- Are the utilities in?

- A.—Public water supply and electri-city is now available to every plot in Section 1. A performance bond has been posted with the Town-ship of Princeton guaranteeing all improvements.

- Q .- Can a purchaser choose his own architect and builder?
- Q .- Is title insurance available?
- A.—Yes. Plots are guaranteed and in-sured by a quarter-million dollar title policy. All lots in Section 1 are free and clear of any mort-gage.
- Q.-How much is a lot?
- A .- Prices start from $10,000 for each plot.
- Q -Who has more information and map of Brookstone?
- A .- See your own Broker or Realtor
